Model 356

Photolithography UV Intensity & Energy Meter with 9 Point Memory

The Model 356 Photolithography UV Intensity & Energy Meter for Contact Mask Aligners is a microprocessor-based monitor that allows storage and recall of multiple exposure parameters (intensity, energy, and time) collected from an exposure series (400 mW/cm2, 9999 mJ/cm2, 9999 seconds max.) It calculates percent deviation and averages energy. For 220, 254, 260, 310, 365, 380, 400, 420, 436, and 540 nm wavelengths. Other wavelengths are available.

APPLICATION

Perfect for a wide variety of industries where the precise measurement of UV energy is essential, the Model 356 is designed for any application requiring repeatable, reliable UV measurement.

FEATURES

- Averages up to 9 exposure readings

- Digital display provides clear, NIST traceable measurements
- Measures Intensity, Time, and Energy
- Records % deviation over a series of exposures
- Recognizes probe wavelength which prevents errors in setup
- Simple push button operation provides reliable results
- Detachable probes to match the spectral response of many photoresists
- Display readings can be frozen
- Front panel reminders prompt the user
- Rugged aluminum case features handle and probe pouch for portability
- Calculated Interchangable Probes for a Given Model
